

Francine Hirsch, Associate Professor of History at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, spoke about "The Nuremberg Trials and the Making of the Soviet Union as an International Power" on April 13, 2009, at the Mershon Center for International Security Studies.

About 50 people attended Francine Hirsch's talk, which was part of the Mershon Center's Empire History Lecture Series.

Francine Hirsch answered a question about the role the Soviet Union played in the Nuremberg Trials after her lecture on April 13, 2009, at the Mershon Center.

Carole Fink, Humanities Distinguished Professor of History, talks with Francine Hirsch after her lecture on April 13, 2009, at the Mershon Center.

Francine Hirsch (center) stands with Alice Conklin, associate professor of history, and David Hoffmann, professor of history, both at The Ohio State University. Conklin organizes the Empire History Lecture Series and invited Hirsch to speak at the Mershon Center. Hoffmann specializes in Soviet History, and invited Hirsch to meet with his graduate seminar after her lecture.